

A reflection on Bach's music

I do not evaluate/relate to a composer according to all his/her output, but according to some of his/her pieces, for quality varies between pieces even in the case of J.S. Bach. That being said, many pieces of Bach remind me of how humble and fragile our human condition is; something which -I modestly believe- should urge our attentiveness and care in a world where ideologies, politics and commerce (among others) are in permanent race of power and control over mankind. No wonder that the god Bach believed in is the one who descended from its heights in order to become human.
